

Part B: Paper Address List Review Materials

Chapter 1: Description of Materials

Section Summaries:

The Census 2000 Block Housing Unit Summary List

There are two types of block housing unit tally pages; one for tribal governments and one for all other types of local governments. These pages are legal size and contain data for 57 block records. Each record has four columns of location information and two columns for housing unit counts.

The Census Address List Page

There are two types of Census address list pages; one for tribal governments and one for all other types of local governments. These pages are legal size and contain ten to fifteen addresses per page. Each address has seven major pieces of information. Some of the major pieces are further divided, giving thirteen columns of information.

The 1990 Census Block Summary List

This list shows the number of housing units that were located within each 1990 Census block within your jurisdiction. These pages are legal size with six sets of columns. The first column contains the 1990 census tract and block number information and the second column contains the number of housing units.

Census 2000 Block Housing Unit Summary

These sheets contain the information you need to compare your block level housing unit counts with ours. The discrepancies between your block-level housing unit counts and the Census Bureau's block-level housing unit counts is the basis for recanvassing. There are two different Census 2000 Block Housing Unit Summaries, one for tribal governments and another for non-tribal governments. The difference between the two summaries is the tribal summary has different types of location codes and a column for Trust Land.

These are the only sheets that need to be returned to the Census Bureau for Address List Review 1999.

The information on the Local Governments (Non-Tribal) Census 2000 Block Housing Unit Summary List is divided into three sections:

- Header information,
- Block Summary information, and
- Footer information.

The header information is located at the top of the page above the block summary section. The header contains:

- Type of sort,
- The participating jurisdiction's name and entity identification code,
- The date, and
- Page number and total number of pages in the block summary.

Each page contains three groupings of block summaries. The block summary section is divided into six columns:

- FIPS County Code
- FIPS Place Code
- FIPS MCD Code
- 2000 Block Number
- Census Housing Unit Count
- Local Housing Unit Count

The column Local Housing Unit Count is the only column that needs to be updated by the local participant. The counts should be gathered using the procedures and guidelines explained in Part A of this Technical Guide.

The footer information is on the bottom of the page and contains:

- Form Number and Type
- U.S. Department of Commerce Bureau of the Census

Example of a Tribal Census 2000 Block Housing Unit Summary List

The information on the Tribal Census 2000 Block Housing Unit Summary List is divided into three sections:

- The header information is located at the top of the page above the block summary section. The header contains:

- Type of sort,
- The participating tribal government's name and entity identification code,

- The date, and
- Page number and total number of pages of block summaries.

Each page contains three groupings of block summaries. The block summary section is divided into six columns:

- FIPS State Code
- FIPS County Code
- Census 2000 Block Number
- Trust Land Status
- Census Housing Unit Count
- Tribal Housing Unit Count

The column Tribal Housing Unit Count and the Trust Land column need to be updated by the local participant. The counts should be gathered using the procedures and guidelines explained in Part A of this Technical Guide.

The footer information is on the bottom of the page and contains:

- Form Number and Type
- U.S. Department of Commerce Bureau of the Census

The Census Address List Page

The Census address list provides all residential addresses known to the Census Bureau as of the completion of the Address Listing operation. The Census address list is available on paper or as a computer-readable file. You may elect to receive either the computer-readable file version or the paper listing, but not both. The computer-readable file version of the Census address list contains the same information as the paper listing; however, it can be sorted by the Address List Review participant. A detailed description of the computer-readable listing is presented in Part C. Part C is the explanation of how to use and update the computer-readable Address List Review materials. If you have elected to receive the computer-readable materials, go to Part C.

The Census Bureau will mail the Census address list to the jurisdictions participating in the Address List Review, but only after we receive the signed Confidentiality Agreement.

The 1990 Census Block Summary List is a tool to help you review the number of housing units within each Census 2000 block. 1990 census blocks do not always correspond to a Census 2000 block; they are independent. Use this list to compare to any local maps and block lists that your jurisdiction maintains.
